Opinio

Has Multichoice Questions? It's easy to create your multichoice questions in Opinio. Just create a question with a choice widget, and when the user goes to answer the question (with either radio buttons or checkboxes), they'll get to choose from the choices already made. Built-in Question Order Ask your participants to select the option they think is most important and to save it for later, and make sure that the answer you prefer is always the last one in the list. Include All Your Choices When a participant selects an option, it is automatically added to the list of choices. You can also include all the choices, in case someone wants to answer a different question. Saves Them to a File When the survey is finished, participants can answer the questions and then, if they wish, save the answers to a file, from which they can re-open the survey later. Easy to Use Creating a survey is easy using Opinio's user-friendly interface. Public or Private Survey You can create a survey for anyone who is signed in to the site. Or, you can create a guest-only survey (only administrators will be able to view the survey). Interactive Survey The survey form you see when you enter a page is ajax-based so it updates dynamically and automatically after a participant clicks on the answers. Survey Administration Manage your survey by creating new participants and survey pages. You can even edit, delete or show the responses. Survey Statistics Check how many participants completed the survey. You can also evaluate the answers and see if the answers were correct. Regularized Charts You can generate graphs that present the choices and answers at the same time, just like regular graphs. Add and Remove Questions You can easily add and delete questions from the survey. You can even ask participants to answer a question which has already been added to the survey. Friendly Interface The user interface is ready-made and has been translated into different languages. Easy to Print Save your questions and responses to pdf/documents. Easy to Share You can easily share the survey link via email. You can also share your questions and responses. Project Features Surveys, forms and newsletters are customizable and ready to use, and

What's New In?

Opinio is a comprehensive web design solution intended for individuals who need to create and publish on their website various polls, surveys and questionnaires, enabling them to create each form from scratch, and then publish it. The utility requires Java to be present on the host system, as well as a web server with a Servlet/JSP container. Among the supported servers are Tomcat, MySQL, and Oracle. Evidently, its setup is not intended for novices, but the hefty documentation that Opinio comes with along with the educational videos, it can easily fill in any gaps. Similarly, it provides users with numerous sample files to practice and play around with, enabling them to determine how much they could benefit from what the software has to offer. To create new surveys, Opinio requires users to assign each new entry a name, preferably related to the addressed topic, for easier management. The corresponding URL is automatically generated and can be viewed in the 'Survey Administration' section, alongside other details about it. Subsequently, they can start adding questions, manually inputting each one then selecting the type of answer: 'Rating', 'Multiple Choice', 'Numeric', 'DropDown', 'Matrix' or 'No Type'. Depending on the choice of answer types, users will also need to define the minimum and maximum label values, choice labels, integer or decimal numbers. For freely written answers, users should go with the 'No Type' option. Once the poll or questionnaire is complete, users can preview the survey to make sure it matches their requirements or to perform any additional adjustments if necessary. Finally, the survey can be published, so people can begin taking it online, also allowing users to receive their responses. Alternately, users have the option of importing existing files, as well as export recently created ones. Opinio Product Key: Opinio is a web-based application that is well-liked and easy to use as it lets you create any type of polls and surveys you might want to. Everything is rather straightforward to use and allows you to create a survey by simply entering your questions, answers, etc. As far as support is concerned, the helpful customer service is also available by chat or email, which is a nice feature as it makes for more efficient use of time. Opinio Description: Opinio is a web-based application
