Endoscopic surgery is one of the most acceptable minimally invasive treatments for benign adrenal tumours. The technique is simple, minimally invasive and with a very low morbidity. We present a case of pheochromocytoma diagnosed during the 20th week of pregnancy. A 32-year-old woman developed typical symptoms of hypertensive crisis at 34th week of pregnancy. After developing cardiorespiratory arrest, an emergency laparoscopic adrenalectomy was performed using the GelPOINT system. The post-operative period was uneventful. A histopathological exam confirmed a pheochromocytoma. The catecholamine concentration of the surgical specimen confirmed the pathological diagnosis. The hypertensive crisis was controlled by the use of calcium antagonists. Pheochromocytoma is a rare disease of chromaffin cells of the adrenal gland, but can cause serious complications in pregnancy. It is best treated by laparoscopic adrenalectomy, and with a very low morbidity and no relapse.Rebecca Nelson Rebecca Ann Nelson (born 1975) is a Republican member of the Maine House of Representatives.
