Bamboo Tray

Version: 1.3.0 Full Description: Bamboo Tray is a handy and reliable program that benefits Atlassian Bamboo users by monitoring projects and notifying them when changes occur. The application sits in the system tray and never ceases to monitor your favorite builds, letting you know when the projects pass or fail. You will be informed immediately when your project fails by Bamboo Tray windows. Other than that Bamboo Tray provides the following main services: - Open project - Compare versions and see delta - Compare builds - Display the result of builds in a tabbed window - Compare builds over time Bamboo Tray ====== BitMastro I tried, I love it. Thank you so much for the nice suggestion, I'm unfortunately not ready yet to work on a Mac version :(------ BitMastro Hi, you're now in the top of my list for mac support. ~~~ jkijora I've already worked on the first part of a mac version. The main problem is that it is an application that communicates with Bamboo server and it needs to do it through the command line, while on OS X I believe you have no rights to access the command line. I'll try to work on a solution to access Bamboo through the command line initiated by the application. I'm not sure that it can be achieved, but at least I'll try. ~~~ BitMastro Thanks a lot for your work on this and for the additional info. I don't think so. If you can make a request to the daemon and get an answer, you should be able to use it on the Mac. ~~~ jkijora Thanks. I'll try to figure out a way to make this working for the mac. I'll report back. ------ wschobel Can this for custom builds as well as projects? ~~~ jkijora Yes, Bamboo Tray allows you to see custom builds. ------ bw There's no trial. That really bugs me. ~~~ jkijora Well, it has some capability to provide trial but it is not fully featured. I have to wait to see if I have the time to make it

What's New In?

1. Network Monitoring 2. Supports 32 and 64 bits systems 3. NO Root needed for monitor 4. Add/Remove your favorite projects By Jim Leff (www.jimleff.net)The Bamboo application is an ideal replacement for JIRA in the situation where there is no preference of GUI for JIRA. It brings the same advantages to this working flow as do those of JIRA. It has the same workflow, the same reporting, and the same interface with the exception of how you access. JIRA can have configuration ini's or a file, and although several third party plugins can access it from within JIRA, this is accomplished through an undocumented API and requires an extension. There are a number of other key benefits to using Bamboo for development: 1. Bamboo is 100% pure Java with no additional add ons; 2. It's small, not very CPU intensive - allowing other processes on the server to run; 3. Because it's pure Java, the Bamboo application will run on Windows, Linux, and Mac, without any special hardware. The application can be installed as a classic portable application on any machine, or as a Windows Service. Bamboo has some limitations; 1. The times it saves you is best viewed as a plus; as it can not make callouts when it's needed most. This can create a burden in the form of notifications that are generated but not understood, in other words, double-clicking on a notification will not open the related build. To date, I can think of no way to avoid this inconvenience; 2. It does not support custom fields. If you want to use fields you will have to type them in using comment markers. Bamboo is a simple application to use, and it does provide you with the functionality you need. Bamboo is also available in an as-is format, thus, if you wish to use Bamboo with an existing project, it will work with less friction and will require less time. Starting with: Bamboo can be free (or as limited as you require in terms of how it works) and it has no advertising. If you want the Bamboo apps, and the Bamboo extensions, etc. you can purchase them in a package or you can download them and set them up manually. In the past i've been very much in favor
