Q: jQuery AJAX - XHR with upload functionality I have been playing around with jQuery ajax, and most of it has been relatively easy, but getting it to work to upload a file on a server has proved to be a little more tricky. I have a form which will be targeted at an IIS 7 server. I can upload a file and I can read the file and return the data back, but if I try and return the file itself asynchronously, my response appears to get returned before I actually get to the response function, or something like that. The code I have is basically this: `var ajax = false; $(".myfiel").click(function() { if(!ajax) { ajax = true; $.ajax({ type: "POST", url: "test.html", data:`

```
$(this).serialize(), success: function(data) {
$('#output').text(data);
```
