Perimeter 2, as a campaign-inspired RTS, has been designed with the goal to make the gameplay smoother, adding a new layer of tactics, new gameplay mechanics and fresh ideas to the genre. The game's storyline continues the events of Perimeter. The Spirits, who have foreseen the end of the planet, took the final step on their journey. They left behind their guardian planet and entered the same as enemy. What kind of game is Perimeter 2? The game has been designed with two dimensions. Players must use both the ground and the water to attack their opponent. The terrain features of New Earth provide a different method of warfare. Players can dig rivers and mountains, changing the environment in an instant. While digging the natural features, the enemy can be attacked by the Providence, a Tactical Manipulator, which changes the gameplay dramatically. Providence super-attacks are designed to be destructive, with the power to change the battle in the blink of an eye, or simply to be a game-changer. Players have the option of using the Providence's direct action, or its new super-attacks. Each action has a different impact on the battle. For example, when using the Providence's direct-action, the Republic player must spend 1 psy-crystal - a resource, which can be gained by the digging of the game-map and used to get different psy-crystals. This way, the player can decide to try to destroy his enemies with the regular Providence super-attacks (but not without the danger of losing psy-crystals) or to try to get the victory through the Providence's direct-action. Players' Character - Providence

"Providence" is the new battle-machine of Perimeter 2. It is the Tactical Manipulator of Direct Action that was created by the Spirits in preparation for the final struggle. It's a head-on machine, which can change the flow

What's new:

Details Clarified ok... here's another issue ^_^ first, why did gajeel and azrael have so different identities? were they twins/brothers? i know some say that, but again i DONT see it. if you could just tell me the entire history behind it... never mind, i kno this sounds stupid, but why wont the dress-up things work? i have likes it, seems pretty neat, but i can't put it on. my plan is to put a frilly scarf under the collar... but "kkakak", it wont work..... why? just like the pearl version of marle... :P how i wish the super-s-s-s-s-s-uperstar version of marle and the pearl Version of sparry would be in a shadow-match race or at least pv arena, "cause i wanna fight the one who catch me off guard" *mixing hardcore japanese stage-singing and self* XD Ok, since it seems each of the VAs is producing their own agendum-type thing, here's a question I have for all of those guys: Why did you go with Kaiji's voice and style specifically? I know that the VAs are independent, and all that. But, it seems like a great complement to have the man whose voice and accent you imitate doing a job like your's. I mean, even Shirou Oono (another non-veteran in the Discworld) makes himself sound and look fairly close to Kaiji's fashion sense. And Tsuyoshi Abe, despite being a veteran, also sounds closer than average to Kaiji. Also, in some of his shows, Tsuyoshi Abe is some VN character. For example, in the novel Mr. Munch's Crunchy & Delicious Carbonara (Another one!!), he plays the part of a weird ruffian named Doronboz. I have to admit, he has a pretty nice voice for Doronboz, but he sounds

way too generic to be Axe-brass (With all respect to Mr. Shirou Oono) No, I don't mean to sound like an old hack, I just was wondering why there was such a focus on Kaiji's vibe. Because honestly, even the actors who do impersonate Kaiji (I don't know if they're a VA, or whether they actually really are
