Tue, 26 Nov 2013 07:54:20 +0000118521 >On February 21st at 6pm PT, a secondary lag spike, not originally included in our post-release plans, will be released in the game. This is a regular, standard lag spike that's happened every time they've started uptesting since the game's release. In the first few days, some players will have to use the exact same top 10 most unpopular/underrated items, or the game may recognize this and give them small/moderate boosts. But in about a week, more people will need those same items, and the lag spike we'll always have will kick in, so the items that were used most earlier this month will slip into slightly less demand in one week, and so on. But we already have a pattern, because we want to preserve as much player activity on the servers as possible.

In addition to this change, an extra, newer item that can be used instead of the most popular/rated/underrated items will be added to the item shop. Performance bonus. Players without these items will still be able to use the game, but gameplay may shift further into standardized gear; all items are roughly equivalent, so the game doesn't care how you've earned your items. But in particular, items that are already "old" will be replaced by this new one, so if you want "old" items, you'll need to re-roll them after the new item is added on February 21st. Also, any items that were anywhere in the top 50 list will be awarded with a small boost to their AOMR by Feb 23rd.

So what does this mean for you? Make sure you use the AOMR tool at least once a week, to track your item utility, and remember that your items will likely be less useful two weeks after the item
