"With motion-capture technology at our disposal, we can create complex interactions between the players and the ball even on small surfaces, such as a tiny, 8x8 pixel area," said FIFA gameplay design director Leslie Chou. "For example, setting a player a pace on a set of stairs and creating a jump would require the exact right balance between speed and mechanical output." FIFA 22 introduces "Designed to Perform," a brand-new AI system that learns the game at a higher level than ever before. Designed by award-winning game AI engineer Dina Gilio-Krebs, "Designed to Perform" has four distinct AI traits: behavior, positional awareness, territorial awareness and intelligent finishing. "Over the last few years, we have been developing AI systems that add a level of sophistication rarely seen in video games, and we've constantly refined the balance between responsiveness and control in our games," said Gilio-Krebs. "We've now put this expertise into a new layer of our AI for FIFA 22, and we've created characters that are much more nuanced and intelligent on the pitch." AI behaviors used for tactical decision-making include anticipation, territorial awareness and aggressive defending. Positional awareness ensures that AI-controlled players react to the ball and other players with intelligence and anticipation. Territorial awareness means that AI-controlled players possess the awareness to recognize potential danger and react accordingly. Intelligent finishing is the final component, enabling the player to react quickly when it comes to decision-making on the pitch. These behaviors add a new level of tactical sophistication to FIFA gameplay. FIFA 22 introduces a new third-party football prediction system. Gamers can now use the power of the EA SPORTS Football Club to use the latest football data, historical matches, player ratings and performance on the pitch to predict live and win rewards and achievements. "We are always looking for new ways to enhance the enjoyment and level of realism in our games," said FIFA gameplay design director Leslie Chou. "As the use of technology becomes more integrated into everyday life, we are proud to offer our players new ways to interact with the game and earn FIFA rewards." FIFA 18 introduced an entirely redesigned Career Mode and LIVE Seasons that introduce ranked play and the ability to make career moves to new leagues and countries. FIFA 18 also introduced the ability to
