What's New in the Rush?

The simple audio file organizer Rush comes with several sorting options, which can make it an efficient tool for creating the required file libraries. Demos & How-Tos Why not sink your time and energy into a compelling Final Cut Pro X tutorial? Broadcast Studio Works for the iPad What are you doing right now? Crafting your next hit song? Running from one job to the next? Maybe you're surfing the Internet for something to get your creative juices flowing. As the saying goes, "It's what you do that makes you who you are." And the good news is that you can create your own song with the ease of using an iDevice. Ready? Let's begin. First, you want a song. Anything will do. You can find one by checking out the iTunes store, or you can visit YouTube. Then, you open your favorite writing app. Like iMovie, Final Cut Pro X is also a bit more finicky. The software can be installed on any iDevice, but you need to have some sort of account for it. Let's go ahead and start up the video app on your iPad. This will start up the song editor. You're going to edit this song in the Story Mode. After you've created your song, you want to work on the title. In Final Cut Pro X, you can edit a title like the other titles in the timeline. You can change the font style, font size and everything else. What it's best to do is work on the first one. Then, you can duplicate the title and paste it on every title in the timeline. A blue highlight will be on the text. You're going to remove it from the first title. Just go to the first title and click on the little n in the upper right-hand corner. When you do that, a menu pops up. You're going to click on the minus sign. Then, you can click on the last word in the last sentence in the first title. That last one is the title. Go into the inspector and type in "test." Then, click on the plus sign. Click on the copy button. That's good. That's what you want. You're going to move this over to the second title. Just click on the first one and move it across. Just type in "this," and click on the paste
