You can view more about this product here: Unterseeboot Schleswig-Holstein Description: The Unterseeboot Schleswig-Holstein is a fictional German heavy sea boat in the Traveller universe. Like many nautical designs created by Mongoose Publishing, it has roots in the German navy's Unterseeboot ("Uboat") designs during World War II.Similar to the Von der Heydt-class U-boat of Avalon Hill, the Unterseeboot Schleswig-Holstein is a heavy sea boat (hence its German name) with a diesel engine (hence its light electric motor). It was designed to move around the oceans for short periods of time only, and not for long-range oceanic voyages. Unlike those submarines designed for missions in the Atlantic, the Unterseeboot Schleswig-Holstein (unlike its sister ship the Unterseeboot Salamander) does not have a diving compartment, meaning it cannot dive under the surface. Its most distinctive trait, however, is its command deck, located just forward of the bridge. The design permits the rapid deployment and retraction of the bow, giving the boat a powerful air blast that can be used against a variety of targets.The Unterseeboot Schleswig-Holstein was designed by Philippe Berthelot. L4L Science VLR-R25 Combat Drone Description: The L4L Science VLR-R25 Combat Drone is a fictional unmanned aerial vehicle designed by Mongoose Publishing.Similar to the Hanna Robotics DH-UAV-12 Dumbhead, the L4L Science VLR-R25 is a bipedal drone. Like the AH-1 Cobra, the AH-1D Cobra, and the AH-1F Apache, the VLR-R25 is intended for close-in, aerial combat. The VLR-R25 relies on a static stabilized landing platform, mounted on a larger landing platform called the "mobile base" for takeoff and landing. Unlike the Cobra, however, the mobile base is much more robust, and can support the weight of the operator and his equipment. However, it is much easier to take off and land on the stationary landing platform.Like the Cobra and the Apache, the VLR-R25 has

I realize that there are a ton of questions and answers concerning this question already but I'm looking for an optimized way to do this. I can get a random permutation by using a class I found on this site that cycles through a list of chars and returns a random one. My input for this would be a strings like "apples, oranges, blueberries, cherries". Instead of getting a random permutation of the string, it gives me something like [a, e, p, l, c, r, e, s,b, o, r, o, n, m, h, e, n, s, g, e] Since the list of chars is really easy to generate, I would think to output a string that has only the characters of the original string (replacing a space with a dash, etc. so it's easy to join later on), but when I tried implementing this, it outputted each character of the string every time and thus became really inefficient. My current solution is to use two string arrays and just shift one of them out, but this is inefficient when compared with generating a List of chars and converting a random permutation of that list. So, two questions. Is there a more efficient way of generating a list of chars from a string such that it randomly cycles through each character but stays in a consistent order

In recent years, risk communication has become a major area of research, with a focus on finding a balance between expressing risk and providing information that is understandable and useful to people. However, many researchers (and many people in risk decision-making settings) have a mistaken view that the term social security is a reserved and highly defined term. This paper critically examines that view to make the point that the term social security can be used as a shorthand to refer to a wide range of information/disclosure related to the health-related needs of an individual. How that range is understood and used in both social science and risk decision research is briefly discussed.Q: How to kill webpack-dev-server I try to kill webpack-dev-server but it seems that it is stuck: How can I kill webpack-dev
