Infectious complications, including upper respiratory tract infections, otitis media and bronchopneumonia, are frequent in autosomal dominant polycystic kidney disease (ADPKD). However, to the best of our knowledge, there have been no studies on the correlation between the infection incidence and the type of the infectious disease, the degree of renal function and liver cirrhosis. We investigated the infection incidence and various parameters using a patient questionnaire on 206 patients with ADPKD. The frequency of upper respiratory tract infections was 73%, that of otitis media was 40%, and that of bronchopneumonia was 40%. Infectious diseases, except otitis media, were positively correlated with the degree of renal function and the presence of liver cirrhosis. We recommend comprehensive prophylactic and therapeutic management for infectious diseases. The present invention relates to a video signal receiver. In digital video signals of the NTSC system, interlacing of progressive video signal sequences and repetition of fields occur as a result of the scanning pattern of the television receivers. For the signal transmission and recording, the interlacing and repetition of fields and the horizontal scan rate must be transmitted within the bandwidth available for such transmissions. As a result, the transmission rate is lowered by these features. If a video signal having a high resolution is to be recorded, the vertical and horizontal scan rates of the video signal must be increased, but then the transmission rate also increases. It is known that a signal of the interlaced scanning pattern, which is not usable directly for the television display, can be converted to a progressive signal by electronic means, in particular by means of field stores. These field stores consist essentially of a low-impedance network having capacitive and inductive terminals, whose charges are discharged by means of field-to-field switching into a high-impedance network having open capacitive and inductive terminals and into a video line via a video input amplifier. In a video signal receiver,
