that are amny of these: TurboFloorPlan3D Home & Landscape Pro v15.0 Windows TurboFloorPlan3D Home & Landscape Pro v16.0 That are very similar to any of these: DesignBuilder.v2.2.5 Delcam v16.08 for. A: Thank you for providing as much detail as you do, we are able to give you the answer we wanted to give you, no matter how annoying it is to review the answer. First thing, as you wrote it is not possible to reverse engineer. It is a mathematical formula that is used to calculate the IMSI number, it is different for every mobile phone. The version you are looking for is 16.0.C1.901. Explanation of the.C1.901 This number follows the format: C1 is the abbreviation for Country code 1 is the service provider carrier of the network, it can be a satellite network, a cellular network, etc. 901 is the databook used to calculate the IMSI number for this carrier, this is the version of the software that you are looking for. I hope this is clear enough and it is what you were looking for :) Quarterly, Atlantic Monthly Press publishes a richly illustrated book of original stories and poems about the glorious, incomprehensible universe. A: The error is because you've entered: "`^\s`" As your regular expression does not match the three non-space characters which follow the space in your input text. Try replacing that with: "`^\s*`" If that doesn't work you can double-check the "last" line in your regular expression by changing the ending to this: "`\s*$`"

And re-running it in the tutorial so you can spot the difference. Also note that you need to be explicit about escaping. as the string literal (you didn't require this for what comes before it but I would recommend doing so here for general good practice). Q: How to identify by access token how many messages were sent between the last two activities? In case that my client application registers to SignalR, for the next hours I get access token for the hub. For the next time, I can apply for the new token. Now I would like to know how many messages were sent between the last two activities? Is there a possibility to determine that by some sort of token property? A: You can pass this information with the Connection.StateChanged event public class CarDealerHub : Hub { private int count = 0; public override Task OnConnected() { return base.OnConnected(); } public override Task OnDisconnected(bool stopCalled) { if (stopCalled) return base.OnDisconnected(stopCalled); else { count++; return Clients.All.SendAsync("test " + count); } d0c515b9f4
