Do you want to enable your business's internet connection securely? If your answer is Yes, then you should take an interest in securing the Wi-Fi network of your home or office. How is the Wi-Fi network secured? The wireless encryption used to secure the internet in the home and office to prevent hackers to steal your data and to allow you to connect to the internet. It's called WEP, Wi-Fi Encryption, or WPA, Wi-Fi Protected Access. Both WEP and WPA were developed by the Wi-Fi Alliance - wireless networking industry consortium. It ensures that only authorized users can use the network. Which is better to use? If you are running Windows OS, you can either opt for WPA, or WEP. It doesn't matter which one you use. You can connect your PC using either of the encryption methods. Both WEP and WPA are stored at the hardware level, by the hardware installed in the router. You can change the setting as you want, but even if you do so, the settings are stored in a non-volatile memory. So the next time you restart the router, the new settings will be used automatically. On the other hand, if you have a Mac OS, the only way to secure the Wi-Fi network is to use WPA. You can't use WEP, as it is a closed standard. In fact, the only way to enter the WEP mode of operation is by means of a rootkit or hacking an authorized user. WE

Our world is saturated with people who want more money than they currently have. By implementing a Wireless Key Generator, you can increase the amount of money you can make using your existing WiFi. These methods are not illegal in any way, but taking money from someone without their permission is not right. So why not take advantage of the Internet and Wireless Networks. If you are still wondering how this all works, you need to know that a network allows us to connect to the Internet. We use keys, like Private and Public keys to identify and authenticate us as the owners of the network. Our network owner can then charge us for the use of their network. This makes it possible for us to access content that is restricted to payment. The levels of protection that can be provided by a network owner vary. Most of the time you will find either WPA or WPA2 security. These both require a password which is either generated automatically or you can generate your own. Our Wireless Key Generator can be used on any network. This is why it is possible to generate a WiFi key for mobile devices and the desktop. How it works: Once you have downloaded the application, install it on your device then click on the generate button. To start generating a Wireless Key, you must provide the access point network name and the password length. The Password length can be anything from one to six letters, numbers or special characters. Some access points require that you enter in a password before you can use the Wireless Key. You must have the password for the access point network in order to generate a key for it. If you are using the device on a different network, you must provide the network name. The Wireless Key Generator will then locate the access point and use that information to generate a key. Most Wi-Fi networks will set the initial password to that of the network owner. This is why it is strongly advised that you either change the password or set your own after you have generated a key for that access point. After you have completed the process, you can save your Wireless Key file and you're done. Save it to the device or anywhere. The Wireless Key Generator will continue to make and save these keys every time you are on the network. The creators of the Wireless Key Generator say that an unlimited amount of keys can be generated, so you may want to copy the created keys and use them on other devices. Wireless Key Generator Features: • Unlimited access point keys created and generated
