In several recent studies, markers of inflammation have been associated with reduced survival in chronic diseases and in cardiovascular patients. The aim of our study was to investigate the association between high-sensitivity C-reactive protein (hs-CRP), homocysteine, and mortality in collegiate and noncollegiate athletes. Patients and Methods: Subjects were 1,353 elite and non-elite athletes. After cardiovascular screening, subjects were followed for 2.7 ± 0.5 years. Hs-CRP was measured at the time of baseline screening. Vital status was determined by using e-mail, mail, and telephone contact with National Collegiate Athletic Association registries. The 713 athletes (31% female) had a mean age of 25 ± 6 years. During the study period, 38 athletes (2.8%) died (27 sudden cardiac). Survivors had a higher percentage of National Collegiate Athletic Association collegiate athletes (72% vs. 59%, P
