GHI and GHII are not the original files. When I emailed Joe to get a copy for the kit - their format was different. I then asked about this and (of course) got an embarrassing reply. We should have known better and kept ours. Sigh... Copy or Edit? The Goal Whether it was Gherkin's wish to save her job or his own determination to heist the treasure vault, no one will ever know, but even the Magilla Gorilla could not have scripted the route the crookz would take. We did agree to cut back the script length by a third for this reason. Taking down three Magillas in a row was emotional for one of the pack members, and an unreasonable act for another. Furthermore, they wouldn't let her make up the wasted pages at the end. However, I did not write the script, and was unable to edit it as this was the 32-page version. With the purchase of the kit, you should be able to add the omitted pages. Beyond that, it got a little weird...and should be included in GH2. Joe's Letter of Intention Dear supporters, Sometimes stories are told for a purpose. They can tell us much about who they are written to, or what things should look like. A positive look at life in a distant outpost of law and order, where the Power Manged is the plaything of common thieves. This cheeky tale is for you, me, and every crookz who ever stole anything from a bank, a donation box, or a ship's cargo hold. I started this on a whim when Gherkin was playing with his "toolbox" of media. This led to a new look at a different type of movie. None of these ever ended up as a 90's film. They were merely a grab bag of old ideas brought together for a single storyline. Early Video Game Trilogies As most of you know, the Crookz are a fan of both video games and movies. It is for them that the Atari 2600 is brought up in the story. Greg Rogers (Greg) and Jayson Richter (Jay) had worked together on it in high school. Years later, they found their way into the video game industry, and worked together on a few more titles. In a 2013 interview with Retroist.com, Greg

Friday, December 5, 2013 On this day almost 40 years ago, Daniel Ellsberg, gave The New York Times a 7,000-page classified report on the Vietnam War that he had written while working as a defense analyst for RAND Corporation. This historic leak brought the cover-up and lies of the Johnson Administration into the open. The leak of the "Pentagon Papers" prompted Washington to reveal two secret agreements: the Johnson Administration had secretly signed the "Paris Peace Accords" with the North Vietnamese on October 31, 1973; and another secret agreement was reached in the summer of 1972, wherein the Administration undertook to end the war if the North Vietnamese stopped their threats against the South. Senator Ted Kennedy had been calling for an end to the war since 1967 and in April 1968 he succeeded in getting the text of the secret agreement in which Johnson agreed to withdraw American forces from Vietnam. After the President announced his withdrawal on March 31, 1969 and ordered the troops to leave, Kennedy stated that if the secret agreement had been in effect during the last months of 1968, he would have been able to bring the negotiations to an end and the illegal war could have been ended then. The February, 1972, report Ellsberg delivered to the New York Times was entitled The Secret 'Peace' Deal, and was based on three hours of interviews in which he had sought to understand the thinking of the Vietnamese. The 'peace' deal began with the North Vietnamese on May 1, 1972, suspending all threats against South Vietnam. In this they failed. Ellsberg reported that the Nixon Administration refused to end the war until after the 1972 election. That is when Nixon told Haldeman to tell Henry Kissinger to "make a big show of wanting to end the war soon after the election - maybe as early as August." When it became known on July 3 that the North Vietnamese had resumed bombing in and around Saigon, Nixon officials began to call the war a failure. On July 28, Nixon said that he would end the war if the NVA would honor the cease fire. On July 30, Mitchell (President Nixon's domestic affairs chief) asked Haldeman to call Ellsberg and warn him that he had better
