AutoCAD Crack +

3D The 3D application, AutoCAD 3D, is used for design and drafting of 3D models. It was announced in October 2008 and is developed by Autodesk, Inc. in a collaboration with Dassault Systèmes and Corel Corporation. The 3D application has been available in Autodesk's AutoCAD R14 and earlier releases. The 3D application has been renamed to "AutoCAD 3D" to reflect its collaboration with Dassault Systèmes and Corel. Autodesk did not provide any details about the release date or the timeline for the new name change. The company said that AutoCAD 3D will be a "completely rewritten" application, and that it will be "more than just a 3D view on AutoCAD drawings". It is available for Windows, and was initially only available as a 32-bit application. In 2009 it was added to Microsoft Windows Vista 64-bit operating systems, and in 2013 it was made available for the 32-bit Windows 10. The 3D application has a feature called "seamless 3D drawings", which lets users draw 2D drawings on top of 3D models. The 3D application is available for free, or for a monthly or yearly subscription fee, depending on the type of access users want. 3D modules The 3D application is composed of three modules, "View", "Design" and "Drafting". "View" is similar to 3D Studio's "3D workspace" or 3D Studio Max. It lets users choose between a wireframe, semi-transparent, transparent or "seamless 3D drawings" view. In the "Design" module, users can import 2D and 3D drawings, and can view the imported drawings and their respective layers. Users can turn layers on and off, or perform editing operations on the selected layers. Users can perform the usual editing operations on drawings, such as adding, moving, deleting and cropping layers. To import 3D models into "Design", users select either a DXF or an STL file from the application's import utility, and choose the appropriate CAD object to import. In

"Design", users can also add, move, resize, and rotate objects. 3D models can be viewed from the 3D workspace using "View" or "Modify" mode, where users can choose the lighting and resolution to apply for 3D viewing.
