A new feature in Propellerheads Recycle is the editing window where you can easily undo your edits and bring in new loops. This editor will be familiar to anyone who's worked in another DAW before. If you don't have a computer powerful enough to run it, you can download ReCycle online in either Real-time OR Offline mode. Once you have the free software installed on your computer, you can play the ReCycle REX files directly on the APM and view and edit them in real time on a powerful computer. You can save any edits that you wish to later and transfer the files back onto your weaker machine for more editing. There's support for various soft and hardware sequencers. ReCycle's sequencer tool is usually the first choice if you have imported a multitrack file. It's easy to change its MIDI mapping, assign the samples to the corresponding tracks and set a step size. This feature lets you start your loops from different positions. Depending on the format of the file you are processing, ReCycle might require a bit of data conversion. While ReCycle can handle MP3, MP2 and MP1 files, a wave file of the same name is required for WAV and REX2 files. Convert the output file format to something that your sampler can understand. For example: convert your ReCycle output to WAV, or keep it in its native format as an REX2 file and convert it to a REX file. When you are cutting up a song, the process is similar to the slicing tools used in sample and synth programs like ReCycle. The goal is to find a point in the song where it switches from one sample to another. This is usually a transition such as a chord change.

The ReCycle Loop Editor/Recorder is an intuitive tool for all levels of the looping process. It allows you to both record a loop and / or edit it. Use the Loop Recorder for tracking your own samples. Or edit recorded loops with both the Loop Editor and the Loop Recorder at the same time. Edit your samples with the intuitive interface or download free samples from the world of samples, loops, music, and video from the professional online sample store. This version of the ReCycle software comes in the pro version. How do you add LoopRunner to your personal track list on ReCycle? In Version 2.0.1, add the file extensions.rcy,.rex, and.rx2 to your search list in the dropdown box of the utility. Double-click the search list entry. Drag and drop the LoopRunner project file onto your ReCycle project list. Click Import and wait while it finishes. Your LoopRunner project is ready to edit. Simply drag loop files into the Loop Editor. You can also drag a loop into the Loop Editor from ReCycle's main project file window. Once the loop is loaded into the Loop Editor, you can rename it, slice and trim it, adjust the pitches of each slice, and other many cool tricks. You can also download sample loops from the ReCycle online sample store to use in your sample libraries. Or use tools like the Loop Translator to chop your loops down to easily understandable parts. You can use the Loop Recorder to record your own loops. Or add them to a project list in your ReCycle project list. Double-click the Loop Recorder project file and drag the original loop file into the Loop Editor. 5ec8ef588b
